POLO TEAM OUTPLAYED BY 'VARSITY'

Final Score 4-1 For Blue and White.

POOR SHOWING.

Small Crowd Turned Out at 3 o'clock Saturday—Outcome a Surprise.

The McGill Water Polo team, playing a poor game, went down to defeat Saturday afternoon before the Varsity line-up, the final score being 4 to 1 for Blue and White. This result was as great a surprise to Varsity as to the visiting team, as a walk-over for McGill was fully expected. In fact, the outcome was so certain that a small crowd was on hand, Hart House Tank being less than half surrounded by spectators.

In the first quarter Varsity decidedly had the edge on the Red and White team. They started on the offensive, and within two minutes from the beginning of the game Reilly put one in for Varsity, but the whistle had blown for a foul and the goal was disallowed. Immediately upon resumption of play Reilly scored. The ball was faced off, and after an aggressive rush by McGill play again centred at the McGill end. Reilly secured a pass and scored once more for Varsity.

Score—Varsity, 2; McGill, 0. The second quarter began with Varsity again on the offensive. Walters saved several hard shots driven in by the Blue and White. Play was carried into the Varsity territory and McGill rallied somewhat, but failed to score. Reilly scored again on a long pass. On a pass after a flip following a foul Vernet secured the ball and put in McGill's only goal.

Score—Varsity, 3; McGill, 1. After the second quarter Fisk was replaced by Bruker. The effects of his recent illness were evident in his lack of speed and energy, and it was indeed surprising that he lasted as well as he did. During the first part of the third period play was fairly even, neither team making any headway to speak of. The Varsity again got control. There was no score in this period.

Score—Varsity, 3; McGill, 1. In the last quarter Fisk came on again. Both teams opened up fast. After two minutes' play Fitzgerald poked one in for Varsity, bringing (Continued on Page 4.)

PUBLICITY TO BE DISCUSSED

Commercial Society To Hear Mr. E. M. Emery Tomorrow Night.

A general meeting of the Commercial Society will be held to-morrow evening in the McGill Union at 8.15. As already announced the executive have been most fortunate in securing as speaker for the evening a man whose name is well known in advertising circles throughout Canada. Mr. E. M. Emery, Managing Director of National Publicities Limited, and past President of the Montreal Publicity Association, will give to the members a practical talk on a subject upon which he is especially well qualified to speak. The question of publicity is a question paramount in the minds of men in all ranks of business to-day, and the promise of a talk on this from one known as Mr. Emery is, as both of the ablest speakers in Montreal, should be sufficient inducement to ensure a full attendance of all Commerce men at the meeting to-morrow.

The social end of the programme is being well looked after and abundant refreshments and the usual snappy music await those who attend the meeting. Those who have "been there" in the past will need no urging to once more turn out and support what has been termed "the peppiest undergrad organization at McGill." There are still, however, a few who have not yet put in an appearance, and to those the executive extends a hearty invitation to to-morrow's meeting, and an assurance of an evening very well worth while.

LARGE CROWDS CONVULSED BY 'LA CAGNOTTE'

French Play Delighted Intellectual Montreal.

ARTS '23.

First Five-Act Comedy Ever Produced by Department of Modern Languages.

Before a picked audience, representative of intellectual Montreal, Arts '23 put on a five-act comedy Saturday that cannot be too favorably criticized. The assembly hall of R.V.C. was filled with friends of the University, and the spectators' interest, as was evident from the tense attention paid the dialogue and from the enthusiastic applause which succeeded each act, was not lowered for a single minute from the time the curtains were drawn aside for the first act, until the National Anthem at 11.15.

The play was "La Cagnotte," by Labiche and Delacour. It afforded an excellent vehicle for the undergraduates taking part. The plot is an easy one to follow, simple enough to be easily understood by a comparative stranger to the French language, and yet not too obvious to be interesting even to lovers of problem plays and other "mysterious" and sometimes even incomprehensible perpetrations of the popular stage. The comedy is not of the slapstick variety at all, but is very amusing, and was quite effectively enhanced Saturday night by the fact that some of the actors contributed an unscheduled accent to the dialogue that heightened the charm of the "jeux d'esprit" which are so plentifully sprinkled throughout the piece.

The plot is based on the spending of a "pot" made up of a certain percentage from friendly games at something that closely resembled poker, Saturday night at least. We shall not question why the game as played Saturday was made to resemble the national American indoor pastime, nor why one of the characters held three tens, all of them red. Anyway, to get on, this pot was saved up and added to for a year, and at the time the story opens, the last game is just about to be played. The curtains are drawn aside disclosing four French rural characters sitting around a table playing this interesting game. In the centre of the stage is an old tax-gatherer, a government official who cannot take part in the game on account of his position. Farther over are two maidens, one young and fair, and one neither so young nor so fair. Early in the game one of the characters, a young notary, withdraws and hires him over to sit by the younger and fairer of the ladies, Blanche, daughter of the old gentleman in whose house the party is being staged. He is replaced at the table by the old sister of Champbourey, Leonida. At the end of the last game, the pot for the year is counted (Continued on Page 3.)

MED. UNDERGRAD.

The meeting of the Medical Undergraduate Society has been postponed to Tuesday evening, on account of the hockey match.

VICTORY FOR SECOND TEAM ON SATURDAY

Intermediates Whitewashed the Victorias.

SCORE WAS 3 TO 0.

McGill Intermediates Are Leading Their City League.

The McGill Intermediate hockey team whitewashed the Victorias to the tune of three to nothing at the Victoria Rink Saturday afternoon. The second team has won every game in the Intermediate City League so far, and it is almost certain to clinch the championship. The two other games played at Victoria on Saturday resulted in victories for Griffintown and Lachine, the score being: Griffintown, 2; Montreal West, 1. Lachine, 4; Shamrocks, 1.

McGill vs. Victorias was not a spectacular game. In the first period neither team was able to score until the last few minutes, when Fowler and Ross tallied in quick succession. At half-time the score was 2 to 0 in favor of McGill.

The collegians were able to maintain their lead throughout the second period, and the opposing team did not put forth much effort. Their forwards were weak and the shooting very wild. Ross netted another goal, the final point of the game. When the gong sounded the final score was 3 to 0.

The University aggregation all handled the stick very well, the two scorers, Ross and Fowler, being the stars of the game. "Bill" Brewer did fancy stunts in the nets, stopping all shots in a remarkable manner. One side of the nets skidded away towards the end of the first period, and Brewer had to hold on to a goal post and defend the nets at the same time.

The line-up was as follows:
McGill. Victorias.
Brewer.....Goal.... Skelton
Macdonald.....Defence.. Greenshields
McNider..... " " Shearer
Ross.....Forward.... Plov
Kent..... " " Hodgson
Fowler..... " " Slater
McNaughton.....Sub.... Malcolm
Langlois..... " " " " " "

PHILOSOPHERS TO RECEIVE ADDRESS

Vice-President to Speak on Topic of "Imitation in Animals."

A meeting of the Philosophical Society will be held in Tuesday, Feb. 22nd, at 8.15 p.m. sharp, at Strathcona Hall. J. Bruce Copland, of Arts '22, vice-president of the society, will speak on "Imitation in Animals." A topic of this type treated from a psychological point of view promises to be very interesting and instructive. So numerous are the examples and instances of animal ingenuity that one can't help asking oneself "Do animals think? or are they merely acting instinctively and intuitively?"

Psychology which has become since comparatively recent times an experimental science, endeavors to solve this problem. But experiment with the cerebral functions of animals is very limited and thus great difficulty is experienced by the scientists in obtaining accurate results.

From the very lowest type of living organism to the higher, from the ant up to the horse, dog and ape, evident manifestations of ingenuity are observed, and the question immediately arises are their actions premeditated or do they act mechanically and automatically and thus without any thought preceding their actions.

This is indeed an interesting and important problem, for if it can be proved that the lower animals think, then the difference between them and man is merely one of degree.

The speaker will treat with the higher animals especially and an interesting address is anticipated. A discussion will follow the paper and all interested are cordially invited to attend.

CO-EDUCATION

This is a subject to be approached on all occasions with a feeling of trepidation and uneasiness. Yet it is only with the present trend of this entrancing subject that we would deal in this instance, and should anyone imagine that we propose either to launch a condemnatory diatribe against our sister-students of the Royal Victoria College, or to exalt their virtues in mellifluous or honeyed phrases, let him read no further.

By virtue of her fortunate position considerably to the north of what might be termed the academic centre of gravity of this continent, McGill is usually able to escape infection from the more absurd forms of intellectual faddism, which are occasionally so rampant to the south of us. Yet from that direction have come for some months past the sounds of a bitter pen-and-ink struggle waged on the respective merits of co-education and non-co-education in the universities. The United States at the present writing may be roughly divided into two camps; the co-educational West and the anti-co-educational East. In the former division a great majority of the universities are literally swamped by the horde of women, who, backed up by regional public opinion, are seizing upon the benefits of higher education. On this side of the longitudinal line of demarcation such educational institutions as Harvard and Yale act as bulwarks for the exponents of uni-educationalism.

In many cases the combat has become singularly bitter. Recently acting in a moment of pique occasioned by the loss of an intercollegiate football championship, one of the undergraduate publications at Cornell came out with an amazingly puerile denunciation of the co-educational system in general. It was asserted that the presence of women students tended to render the men-students effeminate. With the appearance of this absurd declaration the University was thrown into a wild ferment of partisan strife. Certain members of the anti-co-educational minority even went so far as to hiss pictures depicting various scenes of undergraduate activity among the women-students, who, we are told, preserved a cold and dignified silence the while.

And so the struggle goes on among the universities beyond the border. In many cases, and where such an action is not precluded by the terms of the original deed of gift, universities, which were founded as co-educational institutions, have ceased to admit women undergraduates. Northwestern University is one of the latest to take this step.

It cannot be denied that the anti-co-educationalists have many cogent reasons on their side. From the English medical schools, and even from those of the Canadian West, comes an angry murmur of complaint as to the inconsiderate conduct of women medical students at clinics, where they surge around the "cases," and do not allow the unfortunate male burdened by an out-of-date sense of chivalry to get a look in.

But this is only one instance of many that might be cited to substantiate either side of a controversy that has now reached such proportions as even to under the two ancient universities of Oxford and Cambridge. It is a vastly complex question now, and depends no longer for its importance upon a vaguely idealistic set of theories regarding the right of women to equality with men. Here at McGill we have as yet no quarrel with co-education. But we are living on the edge of an area of volcanic upheaval, and we may yet be swept away by the blast of controversy. Fortunately the average Canadian student does not readily give his adherence to extremist tenets. So when the hour of decision arrives, and the fate of the Royal Victoria College would seem to hang by a thread, we need not fear that the picture of an R. V. C. hockey-practice or club-swinging exhibition flashed upon the screen of any of our local theatres will be greeted with tokens of obliquity and derision. We flatter ourselves that McGill students are not children. In any case the shade of Donald Smith will in all likelihood be permitted to rest in peace for many a day to come. The storm has not reached us yet. May it never do so.

Correspondents are requested to observe the unwritten law of the newspaper office—that they write upon ONE side of the paper ONLY. No communications will be admitted in this column without the name of the writer being attached, not necessarily for PUBLICATION.

To the Editor, "McGill Daily,"

Sir,—

I wish to state that the remarks in my letter of the 18th inst. were directed to the Principal in his official capacity, and in no way had they a personal reference.

As regards the final paragraph of that letter, had I thought that the Principal could have seen in it grounds for offense or a reflection upon himself that paragraph would not have been included.

J. R. LOCKHART.

February 18th, 1921.

To the Editor, "McGill Daily,"

Sir,—

The editorial that appeared in yesterday's "Daily" formed an amusing contrast with that of January 29th, entitled "Vocal Textbooks." In the latter we are told: "There is a very widespread opinion amongst certain classes of students that the royal road to learning is by way of faithful, nay, even slavish, attendance at every scheduled lecture."

However, the mere formality of sitting through a period of fifty minutes or so, and attempting to get down on paper the dictated remarks of a professor is in itself an utter waste of time." And now we are told that however uninteresting a lecture may be, however monotonous the professor, we have no excuse for staying away. Rather contradictory, is it not? No wonder students are sometimes tempted to question the "policy of the Daily" of which we heard so much during the latter half of last session.

But let us consider the reasoning, if it may be termed such, of this enlightening literary masterpiece. First, the author points out, as stated above, that despite the nature of the lecture, or lecturer, we have no excuse for staying away. A very convincing argument, no doubt. "Even if one does not take a note at a lecture," the writer assures us, "he learns something by merely paying attention." (Note the style!) And again: "How many important points are missed by the student who does not attend class?" Consider the case of those students, and they are by no means few in number, who prefer to spend the hour reading up the subject for themselves in the Library. In spite of "the striking points brought out by the lecturer," it stands to reason that no lecturer can cover a subject as fully as a text book, time does not permit it; so the student who prefers his text-book is certainly at a disadvantage. To combine both lecture and textbook is undoubtedly the best course of action; but here again, time does not always allow for both. To quote again from this editorial: "Men who have entered a University are presumed to be able to look after themselves, and to take full advantage of the opportunities which attendance at a college presents." Then why not give them a free hand? Why should they be forced to attend certain lectures which can be of absolutely no benefit, thus wasting their time?

The answer may be found in the editorial of January 29th: "Here at McGill, with our childish seven-eighths rule, the student has little or no choice."

How long are the authorities going to keep their eyes closed in the face of a grievance that could be so easily remedied?

Yours etc.,

O. W.

Friday, February 18th.

To the Editor, "McGill Daily,"

Sir,—

The series of solemnly asinine editorials recently appearing in the "Daily" culminated this morning in an effusion which for pure unadulterated bilge certainly takes the proverbial bun. Apart from the trifling fact that the contents of this "Editorial" are diametrically opposed to those of a similar effort which appeared on the 29th January, the erudite author has himself apparently omitted to regulate his behaviour by the principles which he so learnedly expounds. This is the only conclusion to be drawn from the singular construction of the opening sentence—apparently culled from the pages of a 14th form exercise book—and from the general looseness of thought which pervades the whole.

This by itself would be of no consequence were it not that the "Daily" obviously considers itself to be a leader of Undergraduate thought, and in that capacity such drivellings as this are not likely to enhance either its reputation or its usefulness.

Yours, etc.,

PLEB.

PHYSICAL EDS. SUFFER DEFEAT

Montreal West Win By 3—2 in Close Game.

Montreal West beat the Physical Eds Saturday night in what proved to be one of the best games of the season. The play was fast from the beginning, and the puck was carried from end to end of the rink, neither team being able to penetrate the other's defence. Finally Miss Allen scored for Montreal West, and in a few minutes Miss Date tallied another. The Physical Eds were unable to come back, and the period ended, 2-0.

In the second period the Physical Eds played more of a defensive game, and it ended 3-0, Miss Allen scoring for Montreal West.

In the last period the McGill girls took the offensive again and gave their opponents a good run. Miss Collins scored the first point for the Physical Eds from a mix-up in front of the goal, and not long after Miss MacLaren went through their defence for another. For a few minutes it looked as though the score would be tied, but time was called before another goal could be made.

Miss Savage and Miss Munro played a stellar game on the defence, and it was due to their effective checking that more goals were not scored. While the shooting of the forwards will still bear improvement. Both teams got some very good combination, and the back checking was usually to the point.

Mr. R. L. Hamilton refereed. The line-ups were: Physical Eds Montreal West

Q. Savage Defence E. McLaughlin
J. Munro Defence E. Thompson

LARGE CROWD CONVULSED BY "LA CAGNOTTE"

up, and is found to yield "481 francs, deux centimes et dix-huit boutons."

During the count, Leonida finds that she has an important mission in Paris, a mission of the heart, so to speak, and determines that the "Cagnotte," or "pot," will be spent in a trip to the capital of the world. She goes about persuading Blanche, Chambourcy's daughter, that such a trip would afford her excellent opportunities of shopping for her trousseau, for the fair Blanche has by this time shown that she dearly loves "M. le notaire." When two women know what they want, they get it.

After much arguing back and forth, ending in a secret ballot, as to how the "Cagnotte" will be spent, Paris has it, three to two.

The next four acts deal with the troubles of the party in Paris. They do a certain amount of shopping, some of the articles being of a somewhat startling nature, and enter a cafe for breakfast. Through a misreading of the menu, they run up a bill for one hundred and forty francs, which they refuse to pay. They are arrested.

Dragged before the magistrate, they make repeated efforts to explain their position, and to show that what they have in their possession really belongs to them. One member of the party completely disappears, and his absence complicates matters. The action waxes fast and furious through two acts, an exceptionally farcical judge being introduced, as well as several very amusing little bits of dialogue and action.

Act four opens in the rooms of a marriage broker. It is at this house that Leonida wants to call, as her "affaire de coeur" centres around an advertisement for a wife emanating from here. The missing member of the party turns up at the broker's. He is the original seeker of the ad. In the meanwhile, the party has escaped from the clutches of the law, in a singular manner. The day happens to be Mardi Gras, and four clowns signal the cab they are supposed to be taken away in; they accordingly let the clowns get in, and are free. They come to the broker's, and the expected mix-up occurs.

Act five is laid in a street outside a building in course of construction, quite early Ash Wednesday. The various fugitives from justice yawn their way on, strewn with shavings, and presenting an altogether ludicrous "morning after" appearance. They chase into an egg-vendor and destroy twenty-five francs' worth of eggs. Being required to pay up, they are faced with a return to the justice's, when the young notary appears with his pockets well filled with money, and bails out the gang. The party ends in glee.

So much for the plot. The characters were very well portrayed.

Miss A. Roy, as Leonida, the old maid looking for a romance, had a hard part, and portrayed it particularly well. Her make-up was excellent; so excellent in fact, as to make her look like "the last rose of summer," which, actually, is far from being what she looks like.

Miss D. McConnell, as Blanche, daughter of old Chambourcy, was sweetly appealing, and did her work creditably.

Miss A. Lamb, as an egg merchant, was well made up. Her costume was suited to the part, and her anger when the eggs went smash made even the audience tremble.

Among the male actors, D. Cowan had the most dialogue. He portrayed the "Commandant des Pompiers" in command of the expedition to Paris, and kept up a steady flow of language that showed careful preparation, good memory, and no mean knowledge of acting.

F. H. Walter, as a young notary first, and secondly as the judge in the third and fourth acts, did a difficult thing—he took a double role, and put two personalities into it. As the young notary, he was all a young notary should be, and as a judge, he was a terror to malefactors and a scourge to the wicked.

E. C. Amaron and C. J. G. Molson took the parts of village characters, and their costumes and make-up were good. Amaron's acting was excruciatingly comical all the time, and Molson put over humorous lines with an understanding of his character, of "pharmacie de campagne" that could hardly have been improved.

S. E. Read, as the tax-gatherer, furnished the right note of pomposity and slight aloofness. His diction might have been a little clearer, but his work was satisfactory. Mettalin, as the marriage broker, started off excellently, but an accident to the stage-fittings upset him in the middle of his part, and he hurried his lines a little afterwards; his gestures and acting fitted his part admirably.

E. W. Willard, as a head waiter, looked very neat, and delivered himself of his speeches clearly and well.

MED. SOCIETY DINNER WAS BIG SUCCESS

Record Attendance of Two Hundred Registered.

PRINCIPAL PRESENT.

Representatives From Other Universities Present.

The thirty-ninth annual dinner of the McGill Undergraduate Medical Society was held on Saturday night, at the Place Viger Hotel. A record number of nearly two hundred were present, including undergraduates and over fifty of the Faculty.

The guest of honor of the occasion was Dr. Charles H. Peck, Professor of Clinical Surgery at Columbia University, New York, one of the leading surgeons of New York, and well known also in Montreal, having married Miss Chaffee, a Montreal girl. During the war Dr. Peck held several posts of distinction; he was Chief of Staff of the Surgeon General's office at Washington in rotation with Drs. William and Charles Mayo, and was awarded by Congress the Distinguished Service Medal.

The main object of the celebration was a preliminary farewell to the graduating class and several speeches were made by students and members of the Teaching Staff. The faculty addresses were made by Sir Arthur Currie, Principal; Dr. A. D. Blackader, Dr. J. A. Hutchison and Emeritus Prof. F. J. Shepherd. On behalf of the students, toasts were proposed by Mr. E. B. Chandler, Mr. D. R. LeRoy and Mr. A. L. Caldwell.

Dr. Peck gave a very interesting and comprehensive summary of hospital teaching conditions in New York and compared the latter city with Montreal in this respect, giving it as his opinion that Montreal offered several advantages to young surgeons wishing to continue their studies.

Dr. A. D. Blackader, replying to the toast to the Faculty, assured the students of the general sympathy which existed among the teachers for the students in their daily difficulties and left with the Undergraduate Body a wealth of good and useful advice to carry with them into their practice.

Principal Sir Arthur Currie in responding to the toast to the Alma Mater spoke of the necessity of increasing and improving a spirit of national unity and action and emphasized the duty and opportunity of the medical profession in fostering further this ideal. He referred in glowing terms to the service rendered and sacrifices endured by Canadian men and women during the war and drew attention to the fact that never had there been any flinching from the task; never a desire to turn back or to give up. He urged the graduating class to take this as an example for the conduct of their professional life.

Dr. F. J. Shepherd gave an interesting history of former dinners and referred to many of his early recollections of Sir William Osler, and Dr. J. A. Hutchison gave the health of the graduating class and wished them good speed and success in their noble and chosen profession.

Representatives were present from Toronto and Queens and Université de Montreal, and gave interesting addresses.

"PINK-TEAISM"

"There will be a meeting of 'The Vasty' staff to-day at 4.30 in Room 82, Main Building. Every one out. Tea will be served."

Evidently the "Pink-Tea" movement has penetrated into the haunts of our learned Toronto contemporary.

J. A. Ogilvy and H. F. R. Holtham, as cafe waiters, were also good insofar as they had anything to do. The same may be said of G. C. Wadsworth, as the servant in the house of the marriage-broker.

G. L. Van Vliet injected the right amount of officiousness and disagreeableness into his part of police officer to make him thoroughly detestable. In so doing, he got as much out of his part that ever was in it.

To sum up: the acting was good. In view of the fact that the majority of the players were using a language foreign to them, it was really remarkable. The costumes, and especially the make-up, could hardly have been improved upon. The whole performance reflects credit upon the French Department and especially upon Dr. Walter, who directed the play. The vast amount of work put into preparation for Saturday night's entertainment was not wasted.

Starting off with "La Marseillaise" at the beginning, an exquisite touch of courtesy to the Department of Modern Languages, an orchestra composed of Presbyterian College students very kindly furnished music. Between the first and second acts they were relieved by F. G. Adney at the piano.

The entire evening leads one to ask when Arts '23 is going to put on another play, and also to put in a bid at once for admission to that play.

TO BE ABLE TO SEE NOBODY.

"I've sent them all!" the King cried in a tone of delight, on seeing Alice.

"Did you happen to meet any soldiers, my dear, as you came through the wood?"

"Yes, I did," said Alice: "several thousand, I should think."

"Four thousand two hundred and seven, that's the exact number," the King said, referring to his book. "I couldn't send all the horses, you know, because two of them are wanted in the game. And I haven't sent the two messengers, either. They're both gone to the town. Just look along the road, and tell me if you can see either of them."

"I see nobody on the road," said Alice.

"I only wish I had such eyes," the King remarked in a fretful tone. "To be able to see Nobody! And at that distance too! Why, it's as much as I can do to see real people, by this light!"

All this was lost on Alice, who was still looking intently along the road, shading her eyes with one hand. "I see somebody now!" she exclaimed at last. "But he's coming very slowly—and what curious attitudes he goes into!" (For the Messenger kept skipping up and down, and wriggling like an eel, as he came along, with his great hands spread out like fans on each side.)

"Not at all," said the King. "He's an Anglo-Saxon Messenger—and those are Anglo-Saxon attitudes. He only does them when he's happy. His name is Haigha." (He pronounced it so as to rhyme with "mayor.")

"I love my love with an H," Alice couldn't help beginning, "because he is Happy. I hate him with an H, because he is Hideous. I fed him with—with—Ham sandwiches and Hay. His name is Haigha, and he lives—"

"He lives on the Hill," the King remarked simply, without the least idea that he was joining in the game, while Alice was still hesitating for the name of a town beginning with H. "The other Messengers called Hattie. I must have two, you know—to come and go. One to come, and one to go."

"I beg your pardon?" said Alice. "It isn't respectable to beg," said the King.

"I only meant that I didn't understand," said Alice. "Why one to come and one to go?"

"Don't I tell you?" the King repeated impatiently. "I must have two—to fetch and carry. One to fetch, and one to carry." "Through the Looking Glass," Lewis Carroll.

MCGILL PLAYS QUEEN'S TWICE AT KINGSTON

Seniors and Intermediates Play Queens This Week.

HARD GAMES.

Both Teams Must Win to Have Chance For Honors.

Games.

Two McGill hockey teams leave this week to play Queens on Kingston ice.

The Senior team having already beaten Queens here by a 15-3 score are confident of a second victory. It must be remembered, however, that it will be a team tired out probably by the necessity of having to play two strenuous games within four days that will bear the colors of the Red and White.

On Friday last McGill beat Shamrocks by 7 to 5 after a hard game. To-day an even harder contest is expected against Nationals to decide the City League Championship. Moreover it appears that Queens have improved considerably since their appearance here. Last week Varsity had considerable difficulty in defeating Queens by a 7-4 score. The strength of the Varsity sextette is well known since they succeeded in beating McGill here by a large score.

On the other hand McGill is now a stronger team than when playing Varsity and the knowledge that they must win in Kingston in order to have a chance for the Intercollegiate honors will make the Montrealers work hard.

With good ice a fast game is almost sure to result, and while McGill are favorites in the coming struggle it will be no easy thing to defeat the Presbyterians. The teams leave Bonaventure Station at 10 a.m. Tuesday, and it is hoped that there will be a large number of supporters on hand to wish them success on their difficult errand by assuring them in no uncertain accents that McGill is still all right.

This morning at 10 a.m. the Intermediates leave for Kingston, determined to avenge the defeat handed out to them by Queens on Friday night. The position of the Intermediates is somewhat similar to that of the Seniors. Although defeated here and although in perfect condition, they have an even harder game than their brothers-in-arms. In order to play off with Varsity for the Intercollegiate honors, they are under the necessity of beating Queens by at least three goals. The Queens outfit proved a strong one when they played in Montreal, but on the other hand McGill did not show their usual form. Some hopes of victory are therefore quite justified and with them as with their Senior comrades McGill's wishes of success should be shown by a demonstration at Bonaventure Station this morning.

HOARSE MARINES!

Rooters Urgently Needed for

Game Between R.V.C. and

Montreal West.

Come and see the best game of the season! To-night, at 7 o'clock, the R. V. C. will clash with the celebrated team from Montreal West. This is the most important game of the series for the R. V. C. It will determine whether the Donalds will head the league or have a tie to play off with St. Lambert.

The Montreal West team is a fast one with good combination. With a good sheet of ice, the game is sure to be fast and interesting.

So—everybody—bring your stentorian voices and help the R. V. C. to win. If you think the ice is going to be slushy fall in with the Hoarse Marines.

There isn't much time to study between doffing the old feed-bag and the time when the game starts, so forget about Virgil's idiosyncrasies and the ravings of Hall and Knight, and cluster round the boards to cheer the team to victory.

It's up to YOU. Be there!

CHALLENGE GAMES.

Consolation Series.

As the All-Star Series should finish this week it will be possible to arrange a number of Challenge Matches during the coming month, provided the ice holds. Any class which feels it has less than its fair share should signify its desire to continue to the Manager or the Assistant Manager and a Consolation Series can be arranged. Challenge Matches with other classes in other faculties can also be arranged for. Union between 1-2 p.m., or Rock, 831. If not in please leave message or phone No.

MCGILL SKI MEN FAIL TO SECURE PLACE

R. Whittall Had Unfortunate Accident in Jumps.

MEETING TO-DAY.

Carnival To Be Held Next Friday—American Colleges To Attend.

In the Canadian Ski Championships held on Saturday McGill showed up quite well, but owing to an unfortunate accident the Red and White standard failed to get a place. Ralph Whittall was doing very nicely, and had gained third place, when in the last jump he had a nasty fall. It was partly owing to this that McGill failed to get in the running. No blame can be laid on Whittall; it was an accident pure and simple. The winner of this event was Sundberg. Frank McKinnon, of the McGill Ski Club, created a new record for ski jumps of 97 feet, but unhappily he made this jump after the competition had been closed. He gained second place, however.

In the Cross Country Run yesterday McKinnon came first. Len Read, of McGill, got fifth place. The snow was very hard, making ski-ing difficult.

Attention of members is again called to the meeting in the Union to-day at 5 p.m. Important business in connection with the Carnival will be discussed, and everyone is urgently requested to turn out.

The preparations for the Carnival to be held next Friday and Saturday are nearly complete, and next week end—for the skiers, at least—looks large upon the horizon with a sunny and rosy hue. About twenty men from the American Colleges mentioned in last Saturday's "Daily" will compete, besides those from McGill.

On Friday next the proficiency tests will be held, and also the Ski and Snowshoe Cross-Country. On Saturday morning the Ski Dash and Inter-collegiate Relay, and in the afternoon the jumps, will take place. There will be exhibition jumps by jumpers of the Montreal Ski Club. NORTH BRANCH BEAT JUNIOR "B"

Unfortunate Juniors Lose Game in Last Three Minutes of Play.

Playing hard throughout and having a decided edge over their opponents until the final three minutes of the game, the unlucky Junior "B" team went down to defeat before the strong North Branch Y.M.C.A. team, by the score of 28-22. Legg and Bryce scored the majority of the points for McGill. The outstanding star for the North Branch "Y" was Cullen. He played hard throughout the game and scored 16 points.

During the first half, McGill had the better part of the play, though unable to shoot baskets when given easy opportunities. Thus, at the end of the period, the score was 14-12 for North Branch. For most of the second half McGill led. Three minutes before the end, North Branch rallied and scored six baskets, playing the collegians completely off their feet. When the smoke cleared away the score was 28-22. It should be mentioned that only once, in an exhibition game, have North Branch suffered defeat during the last two seasons.

A TALK BY THE ARTIST.

"When a man writes an 'Ode to a Grecian Urn,' he doesn't need to be told that he is successful. They talk about Shakespeare's indifference to fame as if it were the sign of a small nature which could not recognize its own greatness. Can't they see that Shakespeare wrote to free his own mind and heart? That before he wrote either play he had conquered in himself the weakness of Hamlet on the one hand, and the weakness of Romeo on the other? Never was a man more fortunate than Shakespeare, for he wrote himself entirely out; he completely expressed himself. I can imagine him turning his back on London and settling down to his small concerns at Stratford with supreme content. I understand that everybody is re-reading Browning nowadays; I am

WHIFFLETREE ACCUSED OF BOOTLEGGING

"Booze-Spaniel" Rudely Accosts Popular McGill Man.

SI TO RETALIATE.

Great Excitement Among Legal Lights When Scene Took Place.

Great excitement prevailed in university circles when it was bruited about that Silas Whiffletree, the well known and justly famous member of Laws '21 (last seat, second row from the door) had come into close conflict with the long and powerful arm of the law.

An eye-witness of the incident reports that the popular Campus Leader was proceeding down McGill College Avenue in a law abiding manner when he was rudely accosted by a Provincial Revenue Officer. The McGill man at first was tempted to finish the "dick" off with the Whiffletree Wall-top, but his common sense prevailed, and he allowed himself to be searched.

A small bottle containing yellowish liquid was discovered on one fellow student's person and things looked very black, but he stoutly maintained that this was nothing more nor less than "fit medicine bought special for Ma Whiffletree" and which, moreover, was to be sent to Sims' Corners that night.

The spotter thereupon reluctantly allowed Whiffletree to proceed on his way, stating, however, that somebody was bootlegging in the vicinity of McGill, and if caught, dire consequences would ensue.

Interviewed by a "Daily" representative later in the day, Mr. Whiffletree said: "Tell the students and professors my dander's raised and watch out for smoke! I'll be everlastin' horns-woggled if any pie-faced booze-spaniel's goin' to give me the razzo and still eat his meals reglar. Things have come to a pretty pass when a bird what knows every in or out of the law's butted in on a yahoos what ain't cut his eye-teeth in the principles of right or wrong! By crickey! If I'm pestered once more, jest once mind, there goin' to trouble. Sumpin's rotten in the city of Copenhagen when a bird what knows the robes as well what I do can't be let be!"

Naturally enough, the Law students are very indignant at the affront suffered by their esteemed class-mate and a meeting is being held to consider just what will be done in the matter. What ever course of action is pursued, it is certain that the outcome will be interesting.

There will be a return game played in Montreal in the near future, and the championship will be decided by the total number of points scored in the two games.

It is greatly to be hoped that McGill's team—Dominion Champions so far—will stage a come-back at this return game that will put them back on the map. It is unfortunate that Fisk should have been ill, but the team should not have to depend upon one man for victory. The very fact that the result was a forecertain victory for McGill makes it doubly disappointing to have the Red and White team defeated.

surprised they waited so long. I discovered him long ago. No English poet has said such true things about art, because no one else has understood so thoroughly an artist's hunger and thirst, and the things that give him peace." Just at this point, when I was getting into a talking mood myself, our friend stopped suddenly, declared that he had forgotten an engagement, seized his hat and coat, and made off after his customary abrupt fashion. — Hamilton Wright Mabie.

The Apparition Of Mr. Snark

It was midnight at the "Daily" office. The tired and harassed News Ed. had dismissed his staff about half an hour before, and was just putting the finishing touches to the make-up dummy before putting the paper to bed, when he heard a soft and cautious footstep in the outer office.

As far as he could remember, the lonely occupant of the office had not heard the customary slam of the outer door, nor had anyone tapped at the window to gain admittance by the entrance at the back. But the News Ed. was far from being perturbed by such trifles, as a studious member of the class of Arts sixty-three he had always taken a keen interest in the problems of psychic phenomena, and was considered an authority by his class-mates on the works of such distinguished scientists as Sir Oliphant Pledge and Groaning Toll. He took it quite as a matter of course, therefore, that the sound was produced by a visitant from the world of departed spirits.

He made a correction in the dummy, sealed up the copy envelope, and half-turned in the editorial swivel-chair before deigning to look at the door. On the threshold, leaning against the door-panel, stood a gaunt figure garbed in the traditional white sheet of the other world. Casting an inquiring glance at this strange apparition, the News Ed. noticed that his features were finely chiselled after the best traditions of the Greek sculptors, that he wore his brown hair brushed back from his white forehead in graceful flowing waves, and that his Adonis-like nose was crowned by a pair of spectacles rimmed with tortoise-shell. Furthermore, there gleamed in the eyes of the unknown a pathetic light as of a soul in torment.

But the News Ed. was quite unmoved by the woe-begone appearance of his strange and untimely visitor. Copy had been scarce that night, and he had spent the past half-hour in cutting filler from the C. S. M., cursing softly the while. So he asked the apparition his name and business in a brusque and peremptory manner.

"They used to call me Snark," said the ghost, faintly, and speaking with an unmistakable Edinburgh accent, "I come from Three Rivers, and—I used to belong here, you see," he added lamely, as an excuse, perceiving that the Editor was showing signs of impatience. "I—I came to inquire about the Hopeless Cases."

The News Ed. grunted, raised his eyebrows slightly, but vouchsafed no answer.

"Hang it all, old man," continued the horn-spectacled one, gaining courage as he spoke, "they've been haunting me back there ever since. Everywhere I look I see those blessed biographies. And they're still alive, you see. Can't you give me a line on what's happened to them? I shan't be able to rest until I know. . . ." His voice trailed off again into a plaintive whimper, and the News Ed. thawed slightly.

"The Hopeless Cases, why just a sec," he said. "The particulars ought to be in this book." He fumbled about in the untidy drawer of the desk, and produced from its depths a black ledger-like affair with silver clasps. "Here's where we keep a line on all the 'Daily' men that make good," he explained. "They ought to all be in here." He fumbled the pages a moment, and then. . . "Ah, yes, just as I thought. Here they are: J. H. E. has just signed up for a championship match with Battling Bulecky, the world's champion. J. H. E. ate so much that he had to graduate from the 125-lb. class into the heavies. That's why he's fighting Bulecky. They expect to pull off the match in about seven years' time."

Snark's face lit up at the mention of the famous "Daily" pugilist, and he stepped forward excitedly to the editorial desk. "Go on," he said, in a hoarse, eager whisper. "More, more. What about the rest of the crowd?"

"Well, here's T. L. B.," said the News Ed., waxing almost enthusiastic as the world-famous names slipped smoothly off his tongue. "T. L. B. has just been made Lieutenant-Governor of the Townships. Some class to T. L. I'll say. And he's rich as the deuce, too. He made piles of cash out of that new brand of brilliantine he invented. Then, there's F. H. W., who has just published a third volume of vers libre. He certainly has got old Amy Lowell backed right off the map. Poor old chap, though, he never got over his aphasia. It's worrying him yet."

Again the ghost sighed and a guilty look stole over his ashen cheeks.

"And C. M. C. Do you remember old C. M. C.?" said the News Ed., excitedly. "Darn it all, they've made him a bishop, but the Synod won't let him smoke in the Cathedral, so the old boy drops in here for the odd pipe. Then here's C. B. S. C. B. has developed into one of our leading Canadian editorial writers. If he ever gets his Law and Dental degrees, he's certain to make his mark. Only we must give him time, lots of time. W. F. M., the last of the Hopeless Cases, settled down and became quite a family man in the end. He's mayor of Ste. Therese now."

There was silence in the office as

WILL DECIDE CHAMPIONSHIP OF MONTREAL

McGill Battles with Nationals in Final Game.

ROOTERS WANTED.

Game Will Take Place at Arena at 8.30 To-Night.

McGill's game with the Nationals to-night at 8.30 may with assurance be said to be THE game of the season. It is one on which the future of the Red and White hockey team delicately hinges. Our fast-travelling sextette showed greatly improved form in their victorious clash with the Shamrocks on Friday, and thus made themselves eligible to play off with the Nationals for the City League championship laurels. A good deal can be conjectured on to-night's game. The Nationals beat McGill before, it is true, but it was then quite early in the season, and the Red and White team was vastly different from what it is now. Flanagan and Anderson were missing from the line-up, and, besides that, the performance of the team as a whole is inestimably better than it was then.

If the team keeps up this good form and beats the Nationals (who, however, are by no means opponents to be considered lightly), they will then have the right to play the La Tuque team of the St. Maurice Valley League, who have one of the best hockey line-ups in the province. Were one permitted to use a few more "ifs," and let our imagination run on unhampered, we would say that if they win over La Tuque, they will be able to play with the Quebec City League champions for the championship of the Province of Quebec.

It will thus be seen that to-night's game is one, the winning of which gives to the team of Old McGill a very great chance to distinguish themselves. The winning or losing of the Intercollegiate games in no way influences their chances for playing La Tuque. In view of this, it would appear futile to urge rooters to turn out in large numbers, and, combining with the excellence of our sextette, to bring victory to the escutcheon of McGill. This is a City League final game, and a whole section, in fact one end of the rink, will be reserved at the Arena for McGill Rooters. If the above article has failed to convince you that this is an important game, you are requested to use your own commonsense and turn out to cheer the team. Yes, the Arena, at 8.30. McGill vs. Nationals.

When you buy, mention the "Daily."

A recent invention is clay phonograph needles, made from a dark red or chocolate-colored shale.

The News Ed. closed the book, fastening the silver clasps. The ghost had sunk back against the lintel of the inner office door, and was showing obvious signs of mental anguish. great beads of sweat stood out on the chaste marble whiteness of his brow. He passed his thin bony hands once or twice before his eyes, while the Editor leaned forward to catch his words.

"And Snark. What about Snark?" he whispered tonelessly. "Is there no mention of me in the book?"

The News Ed. grinned mercilessly. "I should smile," he said, in very uneditorial English. "Why Snark has been a tradition in this office for the last forty or fifty years, ever since he ran the old rag for a time back in the twenties. Holy jumping cats! No copy man to-night. Here's where I walk to Craig Street."

He brushed by the white-sheeted figure at the inner door and made as if to leave. But the voice of the visitor, high-pitched and vibrant now, brought him to a stop with his hand upon the door-knob.

"What tradition?"

"Why, he used to spend so much time putting through long distance calls to Three Rivers that they had to dispense with him. He swopped places with the Copy Man, but he was no good at that job either. It seems poor old Snark always used to forget to call in for the R.V.C. copy. Yes, he was certainly the most hopeless case of all."

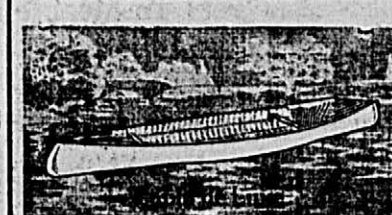

The door slammed to. The figure at the inner door gave a little cry like a wounded puppy, and swayed gently as if about to fall. Then his outline became more and more indistinct as he merged into the ether. Soon the office was empty and deserted, save that a curious odor reminiscent of burning sulphur and of the graveyard filled the room.

"The most hopeless case of all."
